SENATOR CASGRAIN HONORED WITH LOYOLA MEDAL

The 1974 recipient of the Loyola Medal will be Senator Thérèse Casgrain, renowned champion of women's rights. The Director of Loyola's Alumni Association, Bernard McCallum, announced the Selection Committee's choice.

Inaugurated in 1961 as a permanent tribute to outstanding leadership and achievement on the Canadian scene, the Loyola Medal is awarded to individuals whose character, philosophy and contributions have enriched the heritage of Canada and humanity. The five previous medal recipients are the late Governor-General Georges P. Vanier, Paul-Emile Cardinal Léger, Mayor Jean Drapeau; the late Arthur F. Mayne and in 1971 Reverend Bernard Lonergan, S.J.

Senator Casgrain has a long history of involvement with the struggles of Quebec women for rights. She is credited with having won almost single-handedly Quebec women's franchise to vote in 1940. The list of her activities covers a wide range from founding La Ligue de la Jeunesse Féminine to three-time provincial leader of the Quebec CCF party.

FR. MALONE RESIGNS

Reverend Patrick G. Malone, S.J., one of Canada's most distinguished educators, has announced his resignation as 13th Rector and first President of Loyola of Montreal, and Vice-Rector and Principal of the Loyola Campus, Concordia University.

Father Malone is fifty-five years old, thirty-eight years a Jesuit, twenty-five years a priest and eighteen years a university president. His departure scheduled for the end of the 1974 academic year, marks the end of an era for the 77-year-old west-end Montreal institution. During his 15 year term of office Loyola grew from a relatively small Jesuit directed men's college with an enrolment of 850 students, drawing mainly from the English Catholic population of Montreal, in Arts, Commerce, Science and the early years of Engineering, to a bulging campus that registered almost 13,000 students from all over the world in full-time and part-time degree courses on a day and night, round-the-year basis in 1974.

Spoken of by one colleague as a "kind of educational entrepreneur", Past-President of the League of Women's Rights, Past-President of the National Federation of Liberal Women's Clubs of Canada, chartered member of the French Federated Charities, national president (1962) of the Voice of Women, founder of La Fédération des Femmes du Québec and member of Expo 67 National Council of Women. Mme Casgrain was summoned to the Senate in October 1970.

"Madame Therese Casgrain is an excellent choice. She exemplifies with foresight, courage and good grace, the high ideals that the Loyola Medal was created to recognize", says Patrick G. Malone, S.J., President of Loyola.

The Loyola Medal will be presented to Mme. Casgrain at a Wine and Cheese Party sometime in May. A definite date has not yet been set.

Father Malone was the spirit behind a campus development program of the sixties that to many of his closest advisors was an impossible dream. The dream became a more than $20,000,000 reality as he begged, negotiated for and borrowed funds that made possible new buildings, better teaching tools, more qualified teaching staff and an expanded curricula that today embraces more than two dozen academic disciplines. To the fledgling Evening Division for part-time students, begun barely two years before his arrival, Father Malone gave dynamic leadership. From an enrolment of 25 in 1957 when the Division was established, this vital area of educational services soared to a combined winter and summer registration of almost 9,000 in the full range of university courses.

Father Malone, the dean of Canadian university presidents, is nothing if not controversial. From what had been a relatively staid, conventional College drawing its sustenance

BOARD OF TRUSTEES' STATEMENT ON THE RESIGNATION OF FATHER MALONE

The Board of Trustees of Loyola College of Montreal has announced, following a meeting Wednesday evening, that it has accepted with profound regret the resignation of Rev. Patrick G. Malone, S.J., President of Loyola College. The resignation is to become effective at the end of the current academic year.

The Board has also announced the establishment of a committee of the Loyola College community to seek a replacement for Father Malone, and to report its recommendations by the beginning of May.

Father Malone has been President of Loyola for the past fifteen years.

from its historical role as an institution of higher education of les Irlandais in Montreal, Father Malone transformed the college into one of the most progressive Catholic campuses in North America.

An advocate of ecumenism on the grounds that Catholic values have nothing to lose by being tested against other values and much to give in any exchange, he encouraged the establishment of courses of Judaic studies and he invited philosophers and theologians of many faiths and outlooks to join his academic faculties. His attitude to educational development to meet contemporary needs and growing social and cultural awareness was anything but fail-safe. Innovation and experimentation were essential ingredients of his approach and he believed that as much could be learned from the failure of a new program as from its success.

In 1963 he encouraged the establishment of a program of East African Studies something almost unknown in Canada. In 1954 he gave impetus to the recovery and development of Old Montreal through the establishment of the Loyola Bonsecours Centre in that part of the city. In 1965 the now-renowned Loyola department of Communication Arts was created. Following visits to Africa, Father Malone energetically encouraged the presence of students from developing countries to study at Loyola under various government and private foreign student aid plans.

The history of Loyola is the retelling of a series of crises, but it is unlikely that they came with such frequency as during the sixties and early seventies.

Described by his associates as a "happy warrior" who somehow thrived in times of crisis, many found the man and the institution he fought so energetically to sustain and to make its educational values prevail, somehow indistinguishable. For fifteen arduous years when one spoke of Loyola one spoke also of Malone, and vice-versa. The College's survival as a specialized anglophone institution during times of Quebec's prise de conscience, rising education expectations, revolutionary changes in the Church and society . . . were only a few of the forces that his tenacity and vision had to contend with. Without Father Malone would Loyola have survived? is an often asked question.

Two years after Father Malone took the Loyola post the doors were opened to women students, and last year the first female chaplain was appointed to the staff.

In scholarships Father Malone saw established one of the finest programs in the country. Apart from the traditional awarding of scholarships for academic merit only, under his aegis the program also offered "Match of Minds" scholarships based on an individual's expertise in his own chosen area.

Among other innovations was the Lacolle Centre, an off-campus facility for activities which emphasize the quality of human relations; and the establishment of the Fine Arts program, a further enrichment of Loyola's academic life.

Soon after taking the post in 1959 Father Malone rigorously pursued a series of attempts to gain a university charter for the college. A nearly successful bid for university status in the early 1960's was stopped by a last minute government decision and later attempts also met with disappointment, but had at least the effect of influencing the creation of the Parent Royal Commission, a landmark in Quebec education reform.

A major crisis erupted in the summer of 1972 when the provincial government appointed Council of Universities recommended that Loyola cease to exist as an institution by 1975 to make way for other educational needs.

Widespread support from both anglophone and francophone sectors of the population and a meeting between Father Malone and educational minister the Hon. François Cloutier averted the closure and assured Loyola's continued survival.

Father Malone's resignation comes at an historic moment in Loyola's history with the merge with Sir George Williams University now a de facto arrangement all but passed by law in the provincial legislature. New university faculties of Engineering and Commerce were effected in the fall of 1973. Negotiations for a merger of the two institutions began in January, 1972, although the provincial ministry of education had recommended the union as early as 1969 to make the most efficient educational use of community and government funds for higher learning in the anglophone sector.

Aside from his academic life, Father Malone has gone on record more than once as a defender of minority rights in Quebec. In 1968 he headed an ad hoc committee of 10 organizations to lobby for the security of English-language rights during the St. Leonard school crisis.

Calling himself a "professional Irishman" he has travelled extensively in his native Ireland recently on what he calls "relief missions that were non-sectarian in character." He has often spoken publicly on the Irish political scene.

Father Malone was born in Belfast, Ulster, in 1918 and received his early education in Toronto. He entered the Society of Jesus at Guelph, Ontario in 1936 and was ordained in 1949 by James Cardinal McGuigan of Toronto.

After receiving his Licentiate in Philosophy he completed a masters degree in labor economics at the University of Toronto, completing a thesis on labor organizations in French Canada. In 1945 he joined the staff at Loyola as an instructor in economics and after four more years of study received his Licentiate in Sacred Theology. In 1950 he spent a year studying ascetical theology in Namur, Belgium and later went on to more graduate studies at Fordham University, New York.

In 1956 Father Malone became the youngest head of a Canadian University when he was appointed president of Saint Mary's University when dent of Saint Mary's University in Halifax where he had also served as professor of economics and Dean of Studies.

Commenting on his departure from Loyola the Rev. Dr. Russell Breen, Dean of Arts and Science, has called him "one of the leading anglophone educators in Quebec, a dynamic builder and enthusiastic educational innovator whose consciousness of the values of the past has not prevented him from being spontaneously open to the challenges and hidden opportunities of the present and future."
